Instead of the day-of-the-week pillbox...

Say you've got an older relative who takes important medications every day. Or a child who needs to take medication at school. Or that you must travel frequently, without missing your medication. You may have relied on a day-of-the-week box that you would fill with proper pills at the start of every week.

Now you have another option, called onePAC.

It's a prescription packaging system from Parata Systems, which produces medication sealed in perforated clear plastic packets that are easy to open. Each pac includes the person's name, day and time of dose, medication names, strengths and descriptions and any other pertinent details. You can buy them in 30- to 90-day supplies, ordered through your regular pharmacy. The price varies by pharmacy.
